Undergraduate Studies

Welcome

The Royal Holloway Law School is a successful multi-disciplinary community offering a range of programmes including law, criminology, psychology, forensic psychology and social work related degrees. We are a diverse, dynamic and vibrant unit and place students at the heart of our focus.

The unique strength of our community is that it brings together so many exceptionally talented people of different backgrounds, experiences, interests, and perspectives in a subject mix which is stimulating and distinctive in legal and social science education.

We've built our school on strong traditions in law, criminology, psychology and social work. Our unique range of qualifying law courses, together with single honours degrees in criminology and social science, and combined honours courses, offer a mix of opportunities within our key disciplines. We have outstanding national and international collaborative links in the world of law, criminal justice and forensics, and social work; with a real commitment to making a difference in society.

Studying in the school

We provide intellectually stimulating courses for students wishing to undertake study in law, criminology, social science and psychology.

Our internationally renowned academics are leaders in their fields and bring their research and practice into the lecture theatre, helping students gain current and relevant skills and knowledge.

We also have a diverse and active student community allowing you to network with fellow students from different backgrounds.

During your time with us you will benefit from a dedicated support network, including a personal advisor and student peer guides and consultation and feedback hours.

Careers prospects

Our students have an excellent record in securing employment. Employers are interested in both the skills you develop on your degree as well as the skills you develop through student life and you'll be able to build your employability skills through networking events and other activities and we will help you prepare for the world of work from day one.

Campus environment

Whether you choose to live on campus or commute to university, we have a friendly community where you will be able to meet students and staff from different backgrounds.

Choosing your degree

Our courses reflect the very latest developments in law, criminology, psychology, and social policy. You will examine real-life situations and have the opportunity to undertake one of our unique industry placements. As you progress through your modules, you will become equipped with the knowledge, skills and experiences essential to advance your future career.

Our courses are designed to give you a solid foundation of knowledge in your first year and to expand on this in subsequent years. By the time you reach your second and third year you will have an excellent basis of knowledge and will be given the opportunity to dig deeper in to your own individual passions by choosing optional modules alongside your mandatory modules.

"I feel very lucky to have been taught by bright, passionate and experienced lecturers, who were always willing to help me and support my learning. Royal Holloway gave me the opportunity to really develop my academic and interpersonal skills in a very supportive environment. I took a role on the Law Society, mooted in the Supreme Court, competed in negotiations and client interview competitions and volunteered with the Citizens Advice Bureau, all of which provided a fantastic opportunity to push myself in different ways."

Melissa LLB Law Graduate

If you choose one of our Year in Industry options, you'll have the option to spend your third year on a placement, before returning to complete your studies in your fourth year. You're responsible for securing your placement but we support you both before and while you are out on your placement year.

For details of current module options, accreditations and our entry requirements, please see our website.

Studying here

Studying in the Law School means that you will benefit from an interdisciplinary environment. Our research interests include issues associated with law, criminal justice, youth, health, land, company law, arbitration, multiculturalism and identity.

Supportive learning

We have a strong culture of support for students. All students are allocated a personal advisor before arrival, who will provide academic advice and support throughout the duration of the entire degree.

Facilities

To support our students we have dedicated buildings where our staff are located so they're easy to find during contact hours.

Our mock court room, computer labs and library resources are conveniently situated a couple of minutes away.

Student life

Volunteering

We offer several ways of gaining real-life work experience whilst studying. Our Legal Advice Centre provides free legal advice and information services on various areas of law to address legal needs in the community. Our student advisers are provided with an invaluable opportunity to see how the law works in practice, whilst being supervised by practising solicitors.

We also work with other organisations such as Support Through Court to provide students with invaluable work experience.

Extra-curricular activities

A number of extra-curricular activities including mooting, interviewing, negotiation voice training and experience in our mock court room are on offer. These activities are designed to increase employability whilst building on your own skills and confidence. We also offer a range of trips and excursions including court visits, trips to prisons and the Houses of Parliament.

Student societies

Whichever course you study you will find relevant student run clubs and societies to get involved with. Our department works closely with the Student Law Society, the Student Criminology Society and the Social Science Society to offer a wide range of social and skill-building events including talks from guest speakers, academics and law firms.

“It strengthens your communication, oral advocacy, and confidence when speaking about law, especially when explaining issues like client trust, burden of proof, and the importance of evidence. It improves your work ethic, as you learn to stay on task, respond to emails promptly, and complete work to a high standard.”

Jude, on working at the Legal Advice Centre

“The communication is amazing here. The department is very friendly and lecturers are always ready to help. They are all specialised in their field and their passion is visible through every lecture they do.”

Your future career

Graduating with one of our degrees, you'll be equipped with a wide range of transferable skills which are highly sought after by employers. Throughout your studies you will learn how to carry out independent research, analyse data and present your findings as well as developing your written and oral communication, time management and research skills. You'll leave with skills and knowledge that not only makes you attractive to employers in a wide variety of careers, but also prepares you if you wish to go on to study a postgraduate degree or to qualify as a solicitor or barrister.

We have excellent links with law firms, prisons, government bodies and charities. Recent graduates have gone on to pursue careers in a variety of fields including the Crown Prosecution Service, the civil service, the police, the probation service, youth custody, the prison service and the National Crime Agency.
